THANKS TIM FOR RESTORING THESE VITAL MONUMENTS IN OUR HOMETOWN HISTORY!

Our local historian, Tim Pardy, recently did a story on Main Tomb. Born in 1948, the oldest of 10 children she would become Lassen County’s first woman elected to a county wide office. Main was the name for County Clerk in 1947 and served 7 terms. She was succeeded in 1951 by her daughter Mildred Wengle. Mildred served a term and for over a century now we have always elected a woman to this office. I’d like to point out here that Theresa Nagel, much more recently represented 10 of those County Clerk years. She even officiated at my daughter’s wedding. Thank you for all those years of service Theresa. You can read lots more about all our local history including Main’s family on Tim’s blog, Exploring Lassen County’s Past. The blog even has a cool search feature if you’re doing some research. Personally I subscribe. It’s a month mail and I learn a TON about this place we all call home.

This story really caught my attention. When Tim was preparing for one of his historical mystery tours he chose Main’s grave and it was in pretty bad shape. He returned with a positive voice and with “plenty of elbow grease” it was restored. Tim tries to clean up about a dozen a year and even gives a quick tutorial if you need.

Here is what Tim put in his blog back to 2016:
“Other project that I am slowly working on is the polishing of headstones. It is slow and tedious but the final result is worth the effort. During the St. Patrick’s Cemetery Tour I did a brief demo on the grave of Ronnie Ramsey. The technique is simple, a pumice stone and lots of elbow grease. One can spray the surface with water but that is a messy procedure, and involves the pumice stone quickly. If you want to go the extra mile, once the grime is removed, spray with WD-40. Let it sit for possibly two minutes or so, and then use a damp cloth to do the final cleaning. This removes any residue of the WD-40, which is necessary otherwise dust will cling to the stone.”

What a wonderful showing of volunteered time.
